Two flights of steps running up between solid walls lead to the large, symmetrically massed 2-story, 5 bay stucco residence overlooking Ashburton Reservoir. The 13 lower steps carries a central ~~1-row~~ handrail, as do the 6 upper stairs.

A classically detailed Portico defines the central bay. Two Corinthian columns carry a dentilated entablature above which rises a balustraded balcony. The door is composed of a wooden lower section topped by a rectangular, foliated metal panel. The door is flanked by identical foliated side lights and surmounted by a foliated metal transom.

On either side of the entrance are 2 double casement windows with round-arch double lights enframed by a band of molding. The foliated metal window baskets, the height of each window, are identical to the work in the doorway. A small sunroom with French windows projects from the left side facade.

French windows with curving muntins, sidelights and a capping fanlight open out onto the 2nd floor balcony. On either side of the balcony are 2 double casement windows enframed by wood.

A row of modillions underlined by dentils defines the lower roofline. A central eyebrow window completes the facade.

BUILDER/ARCHITECT

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

Built along Neo-Classical Revival lines, this residence overlooks Hanlon Park and Ashburton Reservoir. The grand scale and "Neo-Historical" style is typical of those early 20th century houses constructed in West Baltimore by prominent citizens.
